Going abroad! Your journey to your international actuarial career

Solvency II and IFRS17 are not the only transnational topics that actuaries will have to deal with in the future. The more regulation and accounting are standardized internationally, the more this will influence the daily work of actuaries. This will also be reflected in the job market: the demand for internationally qualified actuaries will continue to rise.

Today's newsletter deals with your international career. actupool Competence Partner JCW explains why working abroad as actuary is beneficial for the personal and professional career and shows ways how to get an international position. Dr Frank Schiller is a good example of an internationally active actuary. In our interview, he talks about his day-to-day professional life and his engagement in the Actuarial Association of Europe. As an example of a new and particularly international initiative, we present the results of the first actuteam Championship, in which actuaries from ten nations competed against each other. And perhaps you will find the recipe – or at least the ingredients – for a successful cross-cultural career in our last article powered by RGA.
