European Actuaries: Current Career Opportunities

In a period marked by geopolitical uncertainty and changing business conditions across regions, career decisions are increasingly shaped not only by role profiles, but also by questions of location, stability and long-term perspective. For actuaries in Europe, this creates a market that remains attractive while becoming more diverse in its opportunities.

Traditional paths continue to play an important role, but international mobility, changing job hotspots and broader career perspectives are gaining visibility. At the same time, professional development is not driven by qualifications alone. Personal exchange and active networking – especially in person at industry events and congresses – remain highly valuable for building connections, identifying opportunities and staying close to developments across the profession.

This edition of the newsletter highlights several current perspectives on actuarial careers in Europe and beyond, showing how the profession continues to open up new paths across countries, employers and career stages.

Number of the Month

2.4 %

2.4 % is the job vacancy rate of the EU communicated by eurostat for the business sector "Professional, scientific and technical activities" in the fourth quarter of 2025. Compared to the same quarter of the previous year, the number of vacancies fell by 0.5 percentage points. But considering the current overall EU average rate of 2.0 %, this industry still shows one of the highest job vacancy rates. Read more.
