actupool Career Newsletter August 2026

Dear Reader,

Welcome to the August edition of the actupool Career Newsletter, focused on where actuarial careers go next on the road to 2030.

Actuarial Careers from Now to 2030

Actuarial career development is becoming more intentional on the road to 2030. In this edition of the actupool Career Newsletter, we take a closer look at what it means to stay visible and relevant in a more selective actuarial job market. The focus is not only on qualifications or technical capability, but also on how actuaries can show their value more clearly: through data fluency, commercial awareness, communication and the ability to translate complex risk questions into decisions that matter.

In keeping with today's theme, we would like to involve you. As part of an upcoming video interview for our actupool insights series, we will speak with an actuarial recruitment expert from actupool's Competence Partner, Emerald Group. To make the conversation as relevant as possible, we are asking actuaries at different career stages what questions about career development and planning they would like us to address.

Number of the Month

22%

By 2030, 22% of jobs are expected to be disrupted, according to the World Economic Forum's Reskilling Revolution initiative. For actuaries, this is a reminder that career development is becoming less linear: staying relevant will depend not only on technical expertise, but on the ability to keep learning, adapt to new roles and translate actuarial skills into changing business needs.
