Designing the Future of Pensions: Amid Risk and Reform

This edition of the actupool Newsletter explores how pension systems can remain sustainable, resilient and trusted in an era defined by market uncertainty, demographic change and structural reform. Under the theme "Designing the Future of Pensions: Amid Risk and Reform", we look at developments that are affecting the actuarial profession. As pension funds adapt to evolving investment landscapes, policymakers rethink long-established models, and ageing populations put pressure on retirement systems, new skills and perspectives are becoming essential.

To complement this focus, we spoke with two industry experts in the latest edition of our actupool insights interview series. In the episode "Pensions in Transition", they discuss the forces transforming pension systems and what they mean for actuaries and pension professionals.

The articles in this issue explore these developments from different angles: the growing relevance of whole-portfolio thinking, lessons from one of the world's largest pension reforms, and emerging pension innovations across Asia. Despite their different contexts, they share a common message: the future of pensions will belong to professionals who can combine technical expertise with strategic thinking and help design systems that remain fit for purpose in a rapidly changing world.
